It has been estimated that one in three men with an enlarged prostate will get prostate cancer. So getting up at night is a wake up call in more senses than one. You are at greater risk. A study at the Copenhagen University Hospital, Herlev, showed that men with BPH have an increased risk of developing and dying from prostate cancer. The study found that over 27 years, BPH was associated with a two to three-fold increased risk of men developing prostate cancer; and with a two to eight-fold increased risk of them dying from prostate cancer when compared to men that did not suffer from BPH. One factors that heighten risk of prostate cancer are increasing age, raised PSA levels or prostate disease in your close family can also be indications of greater than average risk. Even if you do not get prostate cancer, an enlarged prostate is more than inconvenient. If left untreated it can result in infections and kidney disease plus sleep deprivation also causes stress and disease. BOTTOM LINE: If you are a man over 45, getting up at night or have close relatives that had prostate disease or have a raised PSA, you really must read this guide most carefully...
