Can an old lie turn into true love?

Bad boy and sole owner of a successful chain of gentlemen clubs across the nation, Quentin Hinton has no time, patience or interest in love. Not after his brother, Sterling had stolen who he believed to be his soul mate years ago. That devastating experience with the fickle emotion has chewed him up and spit him out. None of the women in his infamous black book or the ladies who shimmy on his club's poles have been able to pull him out of his funk. He's taken his problem to doctors, churches, and once a palm reader. No one, it seems, can mend his broken heart. But that doesn't mean that his demons or rather—love—is through with him. There's someone he's overlooked, but when he least expects it, love shows up in the middle of the road—already wearing a wedding dress.
