This book is written for two purposes mainly: First of all, to give you, personally, a chance to join in the fun which is being experienced by an ever-increasing number of outdoorsmen (and women) through an imaginative use of map and compass in finding your own way and being your own guide, whether along highways or through the wilderness. And, secondly, to attempt to make you so enthusiastic about the potentialities of map and compass work in the form of "orienteering" that you will want to help others share your enjoyment. To achieve these purposes, every effort has been made to present the necessary map and compass theories as painlessly as possible not just for your own edification, but also for simplifying the job of teaching the theories to others. And to help you in mastering the skills involved, a large number of specific practices have been included, suitable for self testing and for group games and projects.
