There is no one way to write a book, particularly a novel. But if you've never written anything with the goal of publication before), you've got to know where to start and what needs to happen before you are finished. Every writer has a different sequence in which they do things, in what they feel is important, and in the way they present information on writing a novel. Muse To Manuscript attempts to give both direction and reasons why some things must be done. Multi-published novelist Beth Daniels (aka Beth Henderson, etc.) stumbled along the same roads once herself and knows where some of the potholes lie. And she's willing to share that info. The presentation is open and personable, and covers genres, plotting, not plotting, length in word count, backstory, characters, action and reaction, editing, and other topics. Isn't it time to move from pre-published to being a published novelist! Previously published at So You Want To Write A Novel.
