Being Mortal: Summary of the Key Ideas - Original Book by Atul Gawande: Illness, Medicine and What Matters in the End Evolvo

Mortality and aging are issues that are usually avoided, but doctors are confronted with death almost daily and are often unsure how to deal with it and talk to patients as well as family members about it. In “Being Mortal”, the author discusses this problem and gives several examples from his own personal experience as a surgeon.

Who should read this book:

- People working in the medical sector.
- Anyone who has to make decisions about people’s lives.
- People who want to find out how to deal with their illnesses better.

In this summary:

Chapter 1: Compassion is much more helpful for patients than denial

Chapter 2: The way elderly people are treated has changed significantly

Chapter 3: To improve the process of aging, we have to be willing to talk about it

Chapter 4: The number of nursing homes keeps increasing, but there is still room for improvement

Chapter 5: Assisted living facilities have shown promising results

Chapter 6: Having a purpose to live for can improve people's health

Chapter 7: Doctors and patients often deceive themselves when it comes to fatal diseases

Chapter 8: Interpretive doctors help their patients to make a decision

Chapter 9: Medicine should focus more on wellbeing, not only survival

Chapter 10: Final Summary
